For the New York showroom for French fashion label Marithe+Francois Girbaud, Formavision created a Parisian atmosphere by using trompe l'oeil wallpaper reproducing wall panels shot in a traditional Parisian apartment.

This installation by Berlin-based Llot Llov consists of numerous slates and pieces of wood wildly patched together like a willow tree. Light bulbs on cables come out at various spots reminiscent of leaves.

For the Diesel Denim Gallery, Formavision invited artist Korban Flaubert to create an installation challenging the shopping experience through a series of large-scale triangular structures arranging themselves naturally in the space.

REEBOK FLASH

NEW YORK, USA

Located in a 300 sqm gallery space, the store features limited-edition sneakers and exclusive apparel collections designed in collaboration with renowned visual artists Rolland Berry, John Maeda, and the estate of Jean-Michel Basquiat. Against this backdrop Formavision sought to capture the pop spirit of the 1980s in order to create the ideal environment to reintroduce these classic styles from Reebok. The design of the space plays with the sense of depth and perspective, tricking the eye by extending three dimensional shapes into distorted graphic patterns.
